Key Learning and Take-Aways:

Participants gained a foundational understanding of how early-stage innovation environments like ATL contribute to national development goals through youth innovation.
They learned to connect classroom learning with real-world technology tools, observed how young innovators solve real-life problems, and were encouraged to explore design, build, and test cycles in their own academic and professional work.

The IIC Cell of Trinity Institute of Professional Studies, Dwarka, organized an educational visit to the Atal Tinkering Lab (ATL) at Bal Bharati Public School, Noida, on August 2, 2025. The primary objective of the visit was to expose students to hands-on innovation tools, foster a deeper understanding of STEM-based learning, and inspire a problem-solving mindset through real-time interaction with the innovation ecosystem.
The visit was attended by a group of enthusiastic students. Upon arrival, participants were welcomed by the ATL coordinators, who introduced the purpose and functioning of the lab and briefed students on the government's Atal Innovation Mission.
The session continued with live demonstrations of student-led innovation projects, including working models using microcontrollers, 3D printing, sensor-based systems, and robotics kits. Students were given a guided tour of the ATL facility and participated in discussions with lab mentors and facilitators, gaining valuable insights into the design-thinking and prototype development processes.
